

THE
New-Hampshire CALENDAR :
OR AN ALMANACK,
FOR THE YEAR OF OUR LORD

1795.

Being the third Year after BISEXTILE, or LEAP-
YEAR; and the Nineteenth of the INDEPENDENCE of AMERICA.

Calculated for the Meridian of Portsmouth, Lat.
43, 5 North—Long. 3, 54 East from Philadelphia; but will serve for either of the New-England States.

BY ABRAHAM WEATHERWISE.

NEWBURYPORT:
PRINTED BY BLUNT & MARCH,
and Sold, wholesale and retail, at their BOOK-STORE, Market-Square.

THE BACHELOR'S WILL.

I LOUNG ABOUT Longdelay, being sound both in body and mind, but apprehensive that I shall shortly quit this vain and forlorn state of celibacy, which I hope to exchange for a more happy and comfortable one, through the aid and indulgence of a kind and virtuous help meet, do make and ordain this my last will and testament. Imprimis.—I give and bequeath to my good friend Mr. W. M. all my manor of Longdelay, consisting of several farms & messuages, called & known by the names of Doubts, fears, bashfulness, irresolution, uncertainty, fickleness, obstinacy, &c. being for the most part waste and barren ground, and much overgrown with briars, thorns and thistles; but capable by proper management, of great cultivation and improvement.

Item. I give and bequeath unto my good friend, Mr. J. A. my dwelling house and cottage; called by the name of Vain Hopes: situate, lying, and being in High Street, in the town of Castle Building, in the county of Imagination; rising to the height of seven stories—having a fair garden and prospect before it, and a large number of windows in the front; but without any outlet behind; nor having any conveniences of a social nature: to have and to hold the said dwelling house until the day of his marriage.

Item. I give and bequeath unto my good friend, Mr. W. R. all my woodland called and known by the name of ambiguity: which is well planted with puns, conundrums, quirks and quibbles—together with several impenetrable brakes and thickets, of dark unintelligible incomprehensibilities.

And lastly, I give and bequeath all the rest of my bachelor goods and effects, consisting of a large treasure of rusts, fancies, megrims, freaks, reveries, schemes, projects and designs, to my aforesaid good friend J. A. whom I constitute and appoint sole executor of this my last Will and Testament.—Only desiring that he would put a fancy or two, into the heads of all the old bachelors, that they may follow me into the blessed land of matrimony.

On the word REPRESENTATIVE.

TO represent is but to personate,
Which should be truly done at any rate;
Thus they who're fairly chose without a fee,
Should give their votes, no doubt, with liberty;
But when a seat is sold by th' venal tribe,
He represents them best who takes a BRIBE.

JANUARY hath thirty-one Days: 1795.

ANOTHER circuit Sol has run;
 Another year has now begun,
 Which soon will go away:
 Another Winter now does reign,
 And by its power all plants are slain
 That e'er appear'd in May.

FEBRUARY hath twenty-eight Days. 1795.

BEHOLD! Boreas is return'd ;
 Now Flora her sad fate does mourn,
 And shivers with cold frost :
 Most dreadful is the gloomy scene,
 The fields were once array'd in green,
 But now their beauty's lost.

MARCH hath thirty-one Days 1795.

THE Winter's dreadful rage does blow
 Up storms and tempests, hail and snow;
 Which dresse the earth in white;
 But soon does come the pleasant spring,
 When all the birds do sit and sing,
 With pleasure and delight.

Now Nature's pencil paints most fair,
The fields do now her lillies wear,
And in her robes are dress'd;
But when our youth is once decay'd,
We can be never more array'd,
Or be of life possels'd.

With golden fruit adorns the bending shade,
Or trails a silver water, o'er its bed,
Glide, gentle water, still more gently by,
While in this summer bower of bliss I lie,
And sweetly sing of sense delighting flames,
And nymphs and shepherds, soft invented names;

SEPTEMBER hath thirty Days. 1795.

Or view the branches which around me twine,
And praise their fruit, diffusing sprightly wine;
Or find new pleasures in the world to praise,
And fill with this return adorn my lays;
"Range round your gardens of eternal spring,
Go range my senses, while I sweetly sing."

OCTOBER hath thirty-one Days. 1795.

In vain, in vain, alas! seduc'd by ill,
 And acted wildly by the force of will!
 I tell my soul it will be constant May,
 And charm, a season never made to stay;
 My beauteous harbour will not stand a storm,
 The world but promises, and can't perform.

The SPENDTHRIFT.

LOOK yonder, and behold the wretched state
Of the gay fool that swagger'd so of late,
Who was too rich, too proud, too great, too good,
To be advis'd, disputed or withstood ;
See how his garb, which but the other day
Was so profusely fine, so vainly gay,
Is into shameful rents and tatters torn,
And he himself becomes a public scorn !
In him we may behold th' unhappy fate,
Of those made rich too soon, and wise too late.

F O R T U N E.

TOO long in thee have I rely'd
 Fortune ! thou false, fallacious guide,
 Wretched the man, who trusts to thee,
 Goddess of Mutability !
 He who upon thy smiles depends,
 His life with disappointment ends ;
 How oft amidst his lowering schemes,
 His deep laid plans, and golden dreams,
 Dost thou with barbarous delight,
 Put all his darling dreams to flight.
 Let none then on thy favor lean,
 If they would keep their mind serene,
 Unclouded with the fumes of care,
 And undistracted with despair :
 Ne'er shall thou tempt me, thou alluring cheat,
 To quit these peaceful shades, this calm retreat,
 In which substantial blessings I enjoy
 Which the world cannot give me, nor destroy ;
 A conscience clear, sound body, and a mind,
 Content with little, chearful, and resign'd.

A short description of a HYPOCRITE.

AS I esteem nothing more than true Virtue, so I abhor a Hypocrite. I hate those mountebanks of the spirit, who turn piety into a trade; who pray themselves into livings, and shine themselves into reputation; who practice humility out of pride, and charity out of spite; who preach up the most severe morals in public, and condemn them in private; whose zeal is censure, whose justice is interest, and piety a cover to vanity. I have heard these Tartars lash the world to excels, whilst they courted it to extravagance: they extoll solitude, yet were always in company; and praised virtue, when they practised vice. In one word, this race of men is a medley of opposites, humble without and proud within; arrogant to excels, and on occasions submissive beyond measure; all fire and all smoke; saints in appearance, and sinners in effect. Others place Dagon and the ark on the same altar, like Jehu they blend good with evil, adore God in the temple, and golden calves in Dan and Bethel. Sometimes they are all spirit, sometimes all body; now they regale their senses with thousand regouts of the most refined lewdnets: By and by they feast their souls with the most high-seasoned piety; one day they surfeit with fasting, another with feasting; yesterday they were tired with kneeling, to-day with dancing; they seldom miss a sermon, never a play: If you see a prayer-book in their hand, you may swear there is a lampoon in their pocket; and if a bible lies on their desk, a romance lies on the shelf; so that they are half saint and half devil, but all monster. I knew a he Devotee, who would speak so feelingly of the excellency of chastity, one would have taken him for a Baptist; yet he entertained a Miss in a corner; and though on a Sunday he appeared in the church with respect before the Lord, all the week he paid his homage to this Lady; this is not virtue, but an oglio of vices: This is to worship God as the soldiers did our Saviour, with outrage and blasphemy. You may easily infer that the duty of a Christian obliges you to detest and abhor such a conduct, and not to imitate it.
